

Sarah Grilo

b. 1919, Buenos Aires, Argentina - d. Madrid, Spain, 2007

Sarah Grilo began her early studies in figurative painting with the renowned Spanish artist, Vicente Puig. In 1952, Grilo formed part of the "Grupo de Artistas Modernos de la Argentina," a school of Concrete artists created by the Argentine poet, essayist, and art critic, Aldo Pellegrini. The group held exhibitions at the Museum of Modern Art in Rio de Janeiro, and at the Stedelijk Museum in Amsterdam.

Upon Grilo's return to her native Argentina in 1961, she was awarded a J. S. Guggenheim Fellowship which brought her to New York City in 1962, where she would remain for the next eight years. It was at this time that the artist broke from Concrete abstraction and began incorporating urban references in her work. Grilo's formal appropriations during the 1960s anticipated that of graffiti artists. Her highly lyrical compositions and acute sensibility to color continued to define the artist's work over the course of the remaining decades.

Sarah Grilo's work can be found in a number of prestigious collections and has been exhibited in various institutions, including: the Solomon R. Guggenheim Museum, New York; The Nelson Rockefeller Collection, New York; The Art Museum of the Americas, Washington D.C.; the Cisneros Fontanals Art Foundation (CIFO), Miami; the Blanton Museum of Art, Austin; the Stedelijk Museum of Art, Amsterdam; the Museo Nacional Centro de Arte Reina Sofía, Madrid; the Museo Nacional de Bellas Artes, Buenos Aires; the Museo de Bellas Artes, Caracas, amongst others. Most recently, Grilo's work was shown at New York's Museum of Modern Art's (MoMA) groundbreaking 2017 exhibition, Making Space: Women Artists and Postwar Abstraction.
